

BOTANICAL WATERCOLOR PAINTING

In partnership with the Hockaday Museum of Art

Investigate the history of botanical art and learn the skills needed to create your own plant studies. This five week class begins with the basics of watercolor painting – how to use brushes, color mixing, applying paint. Students will practice painting fruit and flowers while honing their observational skills. The final class session is devoted to painting an actual botanical plate. Participants will need to supply some of their own painting materials and supplies.

Registration deadline is May 31.
